The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have. You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—Adv.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic and take a spoonful tonight. It doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick! I want you to go back to the shop and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tonic tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, no give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.—Advertisement.

Bedtime Story For the Little Ones

"Uncle Wiggily and Lulu's Hat."

By HOWARD, B. GARIS.

"UNCLE WIGGILY, do you want to do something for me?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the muskrat lady housekeeper, of the rabbit gentleman one day as he started out from his hollow stump bungalow to take a walk in the woods.

"Do something for me, Nurse Jane? Why, of course, I want to," spoke Mr. Longears. "What is it?"

"Just take this piece of pie over to Mrs. Wiggible, the duck lady," went on Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I promised to let her taste how I made apple pie out of cabbage leaves."

"And very cleverly you do it, too," said Uncle Wiggily, with a polite bow. "I'll gladly take this pie to Mrs. Wiggible," and off through the woods Uncle Wiggily started with it.

He soon reached the duck lady's house, and Mrs. Wiggible was very glad indeed to get the piece of Nurse Jane's pie.

"I'll save a bit for Lulu, and Alice, my two little duck girls," said Mrs. Wiggible.

"Why, aren't they home?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"No, Lulu has gone over to a little afternoon party which Nannie Wagtail, the goat girl, is having, and Alice has gone to see Grandfather Goosey's house. Jimmie is off playing ball with Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, the puppy dog boys, so I am home alone," said Mrs. Wiggible.

"Oh, no, thank you," answered the duck lady, "I have too much to do. Thank Nurse Jane for her pie."

"I shall," Uncle Wiggily promised, as he started off through the woods again. He had not gone very far before, all of a sudden, he did not stop low enough as he was hopping under a tree and the first thing he knew, his tail stick had been knocked off his head and into a puddle of water.

"Oh, dear!" cried Uncle Wiggily, as he picked up his hat. "I shall never be able to wear it again until it is cleaned and ironed. And how I can have that done out here in the woods is more than I know."

"Ah, but I know," said a voice in a tree overhead.

"Who are you, and what do you know?" asked the bunny uncle, surprised like and hopeful.

"I know where you can have your silk hat cleaned and ironed smooth," said the voice. "I am the tailor bird, and I do those things. Let me have your hat Uncle Wiggily, and I'll fix it for you."

Down flew the kind bird, and Uncle Wiggily gave her his hat.

"Just what shall I wear while I am waiting?" asked the bunny uncle. "It is too soon for me to be going about without a hat. I'll need something on my head while you are fixing my silk stovepipe, dear Tailor Bird."

"The very thing," cried Uncle Wiggily, "just pick some of those thick, green, leafy ferns and make yourself a hat of them."

"Thank you," spoke the bunny uncle, as he laid aside the ferns, and thanked him. "Now I am like myself again."

again," and he hopped on through the woods, wondering whether or not he was to have any more adventures that day.

Mr. Longears had not gone on very much farther before he heard a rustling in the bushes, and then a small voice said:

"Oh, dear! How sad! I don't believe I'll go to the party now! All the others would make fun of me. Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"That sounds like trouble!" said the bunny uncle. "I must see what it means."

He looked through the bushes and saw a little white duck, who was crying very hard, the tears rolling down her yellow bill.

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, dear!" answered the little duck-quack child. "I can't go to the party that's what's the matter!"

"Why can't you go?" Uncle Wiggily wanted to know. "I saw your mother, little white duck, and she said you were going."

"I know I was going," spoke Lulu, "but I'm not now, for the wind blew my nice new hat into the pocket of madcap water, and now look at it!" and she held up a very much bedraggled and bedraggled hat of lace and straw and ribbons and flowers.

"Oh, dear! That hat is in a state, to be sure," said Uncle Wiggily. "But don't cry, Lulu. Almost the same thing happened to me and the tailor bird made my hat as good as ever. Mine was all mud, too, like yours. Come, I'll take you to the tailor bird."

"You are very kind, Uncle Wiggily," spoke Lulu, "but if I go there I may not get back in time for the party, and I want to wear my new hat to it, very much."

"But you can do as I did, make a hat of ferns and wear that to the party," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'll help you."

"Oh, how kind you are!" cried the little duck girl.

So she went along with Uncle Wiggily, to where the ferns grew in the pond, leaving her regular hat at the tailor bird's nest to be cleaned and pressed.

Uncle Wiggily made Lulu the cutest hat of ferns, and she was just like a bird in the five and ten store.

"Wear that to Nannie's party, Lulu," said the rabbit gentleman, and when Lulu arrived at the party, all the animal girls cried out:

"Oh, what a sweet, lovely, cute, dear, cunning, well and stylish hat! Where did you get it?"

"Uncle Wiggily made it," answered Lulu, and all the girls said they were going to wear one just like it. At first they did, so that fern hats became very fashionable and stylish in Woodland, and Lulu had a fine time at the party.

So this teaches us that even a mud puddle is of some use, and if the rubber plant doesn't stretch too far, and tickle the gold fish under the chin, making it sneeze, the next story will be about Uncle Wiggily and the mud puddle.—Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Home Celebration of Wonder Interest

The arrival of a baby in the household completely changes the entire aspect of the future. But in the meantime, during the anxious period of expectancy, there is a splendid remedy known as "Mother's Friend" that does wonders.

It is for external use, relieves the pains of muscle expansion, soothes and quiets the nervous system, and induces the internal organs and removes to a great extent the tendency to worry and apprehension. It is a natural treatment, safe for the mother, has no drug effect whatsoever and for this reason must exert a most beneficial influence upon those functions directly connected with motherhood. In a very interesting book the subject is freely discussed and a copy will be mailed free to all expectant mothers by Bradfield Regulator Co., 406 Lamar St., Atlanta, Ga. Get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" today of any druggist. Use as directed and you will then know why mothers for nearly half a century have used and recommended this splendid aid to motherhood. Their letters are messages of cheer, that breathe comfort in every word.

Beauty Chats By Edna Kent Forbes

Living Scientifically

If you run your own house, doing most or all of its work, perhaps raising a couple of children as well—you will have little time to practise beauty exercises, little time even to think about them.

However, if you care you have reduced your daily routine to a scientific point—where you get the most effect from the least labor? Have you all the appliances to help reduce your work? Can you, for instance, plan a day somewhat like this—

Breakfast, dishwashing, letting the dishes drain in a rack while you prepare dinner, salad or vegetables for dinner, mopping the floors and dusting, making the beds, straightening the rooms—luncheon, piling the dishes toward one grand washing in the morning—putting dinner to cook in the freest cooker. This leaves your whole afternoon free until after five, when you have but to set the table and serve, the dinner being ready practically, in your cooker. After dinner—pile the dishes for the washing in the morning.

So—you have your afternoon and evening free, except on days when laundry work makes extra bother. Planning your duties as a man plans his business will give you strength and time to improve your mind, and enjoy many little pleasures.

Do you clean your windows as the Pullman porters do, men whose whole work is window cleaning, who have reduced that duty to a science of labor saving? A damp cloth first, a second cloth wrung from whitening and water, and after two minutes, when the pane is dry, a woolen cloth to wipe off the powder, and the window is clean and sparkling, without time or effort spent in rubbing and polishing. Try these time and labor saving ideas and see how much better you will look and feel.

What Happened To Jane

By VIRGINIA TERRINE VAN DE WATER.

Her Husband Surprises Her.

(Copyright 1915, Star Company)

CHAPTER XL.
"I WILL be honest with you, Ruth," Jane began in reply to her companion's challenge. Then, with a sinking heart, she appreciated that she could not tell her friend the whole truth unless she were to acknowledge her husband's peculiarities. Well, she must do the best she could by way of explanation.

"I want to be on the same old terms with you and the other girls," Jane continued—especially with you, Ruth. You know we've gone about together since we were little kiddies. I do want your friendship."

Ruth's silence recalled her to the fact that she had not been extending her conduct, so she tried again.

"To be truthful, Ruth, I could not afford to have a regular wedding, with guests, and somehow I did not want any fuss. So I just got married quietly. I hope you understand."

"I told you just now that was your husband, not dark," Ruth reminded her. "And I told you, too, that we girls realized that. But your manner on the train that day, and the way you've kept away from us ever since—well, it's hard to understand."

"As to that day on the train," Jane said, "I think I'm charmed. They were glad to see you, whether I showed it or not. But—but Augustus was so full of getting home that he hardly noticed anything—I wanted you to come to see me, and so when you spoke of it he did not seem cordial. He didn't mean anything—only he's not used to young people. And when I saw that his manner was not as cordial as it might be I felt embarrassed—and perhaps I seemed cold and disagreeable—but really I wasn't."

A Difficult Question.
"If you wanted to see me again, why haven't you been over or asked me to your home?" Ruth demanded. "Why haven't you had any of the other girls come and see your new home? Here was a power, for Jane must be loyal to the man she had married."

"Why—why—," she stammered, "you see Augustus has felt that I ought to stay at home and give all my time up to getting used to his house just at first. So that's what I've been doing lately."

"But he has a housekeeper he's had for years," Ruth asserted.

"I know," Ruth tried to laugh, "but

Thin Men and Women Who Want to Gain Weight Should Try At Once This 10 Days Flesh Building Test

Report Gains At Rate of Three to Five Pounds A Week In Many Instances. Full Directions Given.

Most thin, rindown men and women would probably be glad to increase their weight with ten to twenty-five pounds of good, firm solid healthy body flesh and fat if they believed it possible to accomplish such result by merely making the flesh making materials in their daily meals do a little more work than they are doing now.

This is said to be the chief reason why most thin people do stay underweight. They are so constituted that they fail to fully assimilate the nourishment of their food, a great deal of which passes from the body every waste. Normal assimilation is normal and normal weight follows as a matter of course.

If you are ten pounds or more underweight and believe this can't be done in your case, here is a simple, inexpensive and really harmless test that is well worth trying.

First weigh yourself. Then with each meal for ten days eat a single Rargol tablet. Then weigh yourself again and let the scales tell the story.

Rargol may not increase your weight as much as one pound a day but with what increase in health and vigor, and if it does not, you can decide what it continued use for a few weeks further may be able to do for you.

you. Rargol does not of itself make fat but consisting of a splendidly balanced combination of assimilative aids and flesh building agents it mixes with your meals for the purpose of making it easier for your blood to absorb their strength, flesh and fat-making nourishment and turn it into strength, flesh and fat upon your body.

A great many people have gladly told that it succeeds. There are many posts like the following: "I have increased 15 pounds in less than a month," wrote a man from Chicago. Another man who said he had been living over a pound a week and was under 125 pounds, gained two pounds the first week taking Rargol and "been gaining ever since." Last report over 170 pounds. Better than 15 pounds gain. A lady from St. Louis wrote, "I have gained 16 pounds and am still gaining." Rargol as a rule should be taken 20 days or more where results like above are desired.

The tablets are small, easily swallowed, produce no disagreeable effects, contain no harmful drugs, are harmless and at all expensive as compared with results said to be obtained.

NOTE—Rargol, referred to above is well known as a flesh builder to A. E. Ryan, as well as many others of the leading local druggists who furthermore sell it on the positive guarantee, as found in each large package, of satisfactory result or increase of money back. In view of this liberal offer and the harmless nature of the remedy, it would seem that all who desire increased weight should be glad to give this method a trial.—Advertisement.

To persuade the other girls to do the same.

"That's all right, Jane," she assented. "Let's start right now. I'll understand—shall we? And I'll tell the others that you want things just like they used to be. But you must run in and get a box of course. I suppose it's our place to come first—so if you don't mind I'll start the fashion by coming over tomorrow afternoon, rather late."

"You know I have a new position, to an office in Pattonville, as stenographer and typewriter, but I get half of my salary Saturday afternoon, rather late. Suppose I come over tomorrow afternoon about five? Will that be all right?"

"You must stay to supper," she said.

"I'd love to," Ruth accepted cordially. "And I'll tell all the rest that you're going to let them know when they can come and see you, and that they must run in often and that you'll do the same. It's a bargain, isn't it?"

"Yes," Jane agreed.

The Boys Find Them.
The door leading from the church into the guild-room opened, and a stream of light flowed in. Leaning over the choir rail, the girls saw John Ormsby and Dick Guilford peering up at them. Tom was Ruth's most devoted admirer, and Dick was his chum.

"Hello, girls!" Tom greeted them. "The light showed us who you two were. Besides, I saw you both sneaking off to bed."

"They came stumbly up the stairs to the loft. 'Hello, Jane!' Tom said 'Glad to see you in our midst again.' Dick added: 'Hello, Jane!'

Ruth laughed happily. "Yes she's one of us once more," she said. "And even if she is married, she wants to be as good friends with us all as ever."

"Indeed I do!" Jane exclaimed. Then, she remembered her husband. "I must be going," she announced.

The two boys guided the girls down the stairs to the body of the church. Here it was still so dark that Tom did not relax his hold upon Ruth's hand. Dick Guilford, after the manner of his kind, held Jane's elbow in grasp as he pitched her through the obscurity towards the guild-room.

As they approached, the door was suddenly opened from the other side, and Jane, with a start, saw that her husband stood in the entrance. The light from the guild-room, Dick Guilford close to her, her arm still in his grasp.

HOROSCOPE.

Thursday, April 13, 1916.
GOOD prevails in the planetary away today. Mercury and the Sun rule strongly for benefits, while Saturn and Jupiter are mildly adverse.

It is a most auspicious time to seek employment or change. The Sun is in a place believed to make those who would power and influence inclined to promote all who serve them. While this configuration prevails it is wise to procure aid in ambitious undertakings and to obtain pledges of cooperation.

In a western city it is predicted that political treachery will cause anxiety and unrest. The sun is in a place believed to make those who would power and influence inclined to promote all who serve them.

College men and women should benefit from this planetary government, which is held to render parental hearts so that there is unusual generosity in regard to money.

Education has a guidance which preaches benefits for the public from learned men who will serve in new capacities.

Publicity has a way making for profit and success. Newspapers should benefit greatly in the next few weeks. Actors should find this an auspicious day for the signing of contracts.

Something that will bring the Scandinavians in America much to the front is indicated.

Increase of suicide in this country is foreshadowed, owing to the psychic influence of the war in Europe.

Young men in the United States come under a rule of the stars that precludes supreme opportunity and superb achievement. Many specialists will gain fame in Europe, the arena proper, but their chances will not come so soon as the world believes.
